

11/05

Two weeks before my adventurous trip to Peru, I fell while running to the car for my camera. Already feeling panicked by the fact a boyfriend had unexpectedly brought his two daughters to meet me for the first time, I slipped on the slick pavement and fell, bending back the fingers on my left hand as I tried to brace myself. My ring finger broke in the knuckle! Significant, I thought. The next day, my orthopedic surgeon put me in a cast and told me I would probably never have full mobility of that finger again...

During our travels in Peru, Joseph was riding on the bus seated behind me and suggested I put my hand in front of the Didgeridoo while he played...I felt the wonderful vibrations of the long notes pulse through my hand and broken finger. It tingled and really felt better. I thought maybe it was feeling nice to have some soothing attention.

Several times later on our journey, Joseph also volunteered to do some energy work with the didgeridoo on my finger. This time I could visually see the bruising beginning to disappear and it felt a lot better! Maybe there was something to this dig energy? Joseph told me that something was blocking the energy flow and I needed to release it before my finger could heal. So I concentrated as he played, the tears flowed as I thought of my late husband and the beautiful wedding band that used to grace that swollen finger. Yes, I did come to Peru to release that deep grief! Thank you Joseph for helping me on my journey...

When I arrived home, I went back to the orthopedic surgeon for a check up. He had the nurses take the X-ray two times over because he couldn't believe my finger had healed so quickly and completely! He took the cast off two weeks early and I have FULL mobility of that finger. YES, there is "something to this dig energy". I KNOW IT!

Thank you Joseph for all you are and all you do!

Lots of love light and joy from the beach,
Donna

PS I LOVE the sounds of the didgeridoo too.
